Let's Start!

The Survey Results

Learning Outcome

Exchange information about people's interests and backgrounds using a wider range of language.

Ask your partner:

- When you are purchasing an item, do you base your decision solely on price?
- How much of a factor is a company's reputation in your purchasing decisions?

Can Do Statements

- I can summarize an informational memo about the results of a survey
- I can talk about jobs and work
- I can provide a rationale for the importance of certain ideas

Let's Explore!

Synthesizing* the results.

* To "synthesize" means to put together or complete.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Miranda: A lot can be said based on the survey's results. Here's a summary. I found that people had strongly negative opinions of Holly's.
- Janet: This could be directly related to the scandal.
- Miranda: Correct. I noted that personal impressions of Holly's depended on people's awareness of the scandal.
- Janet: This should definitely be addressed by our rebranding team.
- Miranda: Absolutely. It was apparent that while they liked the product, they have no other impressions.
- Janet: A focus on building a relationship with our clients could be emphasized. It's obvious that we're lacking that.
- Miranda: True. I'd say everyone showed ambivalence about the name. It's clear that no one knows Holly's objectives besides making a good product and business profit.
- Janet: It's evident that Holly's had severely lacked PR until recently.
- Farmani: Is there anything positive?
- Miranda: Yes. Some mentioned that customer satisfaction might be Holly's new priority.
- Farmani: Sounds like something that could be built on.
- Janet: Yes. This new connection with consumers must be built on.
- Farmani: I'm guessing the name should be changed.
- Miranda: Yes. Something meaningful to consumers should be reflected.
- Farmani: Rebranding must be given priority.
- Janet: Your objectives must be given careful thought. People have seen Holly's as being no different than any other profit-driven business until this survey. I advise acting while they are thinking.
- Farmani: I feel like I have been handed an opportunity.
- Janet: You might well have.
- Farmani: I need time to think, but let's meet again.
- Janet: One question, if I may. Why the name Holly's?
- Farmani: Holly Farmani, my late wife. I think her name should be rebranded after all this.

Let's Practice!

The results are *in! Let's find out what people thought!

*If something is "in," then it has arrived.

Summarizing Results

Surveys are an effective way of collecting from current or prospective customers. After conducting a survey, it is important to gather all the information and summarize the responses.

Here's some language you can use to summarize and interpret responses.

- I found that ...
- I noted that ...
- It was apparent that ...
- It's obvious that ...
- I'd say ...
- It's clear that ...
- It's evident that ...

Examples:

- I noted that people's impressions depended on their awareness of the company.
- It was apparent that people liked the product.
- It's clear that the company's objectives are unknown to the public.
- It's evident that company lacks personal relations.

Passive of Modals Verbs

The passive voice is commonly used in English. We use the passive when the 'doer' (agent) of the action is not so important. We are not interested in knowing who did the action. Our attention is on the object.

Here's some more information about the passive of modal verbs.

1. Modals: can / could + be + past participle We use these forms to talk about present and past possibility.

There so much that can be said based on the survey's results.

It's clear that a company-consumer relationship could be emphasized.

2. Modals: must / should + be + past participle These forms are used to talk about necessity and advisability.

A new link with potential customers must be built on.

The name should definitely be changed to something more appealing.

All these ideas must be given careful thought before being implemented.
